The Victoria Colonist says: Sir Wilfrid Laurier promises a tariff commission with the view of seeing what changes can be made in the customs schedule. He has intimated that he expects the changes will be towards a lower tariff. Pending the appointment of such a commission it would seem to be premature to discuss reciprocity with the United States. It is noteworthy in this connection that the demand for a lower tariff in the United States is growing. By the way a writer in the National Review says that reciprocity between Canada and the United States will be fatal to the Empire. Really it seems as if some people in the United Kingdom had taken leave of their senses. The Colonist discusses much utterances as this with a well known British journalist within a month or two. He was asked if the people who wrote such things, and those others who represent that Canada can only be kept within the Empire by the imposition by the Mother Country of a duty on foreign wheat, really believed what they said, and he frankly replied that they did not, but that it was necessary to make the people of the United Kingdom think so. Just imagine any one thinking it necessary to convince the people of that country that if we permit the United States to sell us coal without charging any duty and the United States do the same thing by us, and that if we reach an agreement whereby we will not charge each other any duty on timber or potatoes, the foundations of the Empire will be rent in twain.

RED DEER'S BAD START
Wagner was in hot water in the first. Stokes, the first man up, hit a grounder right at him, and he promptly muffed it. Hoar fouled out and Lepper got down on a fielder's choice, both men being safe. A wild pitch let Stokes score, and Chandler got a pass and got around to third on a couple of wild pitches, and was caught there on Chase's fielder's choice. Howard got a hit and errors let Perrin and Mills down, Chase, Howard and Perrin scoring before the innings was finished. It looked bad for Red Deer.

HEWSON INJURED
The visitors got two in the fourth against another run the Victorias made. Wagner got a Chase, and scored when Howard muffed a throw of Hewson's grounder to first, and then threw the ball over Chandler's head. Hewson was injured and out of the game, and the player who ran for him was given third on the two overthrows. He came in on Cunningham's hit. Seidenbecher scored in the Victorias' half, getting a pass and being advanced to third on Hoar's double, and coming in on Chandler's hit. This made the Victorias' total six runs.

RED DEER CAUGHT UP SOME
Washburn's hit, Howard's miff of a throw to first, letting Evans have the bag, a hit by Wagner and a two-bagger from Cunningham's bat brought Red Deer within a run of the Victorias. Three runs scored for them.

A DOUBLE PLAY
In the last innings Wagner and Hewson got a hit apiece, and it looked good for a tied up score, but Cunningham hit into a double play, as his fly was caught by Hoar and Wagner was caught off second base. Previously Evans had grounded out.

RED DEER LOSE TO CALGARY.
The Red Deer ball team visited Calgary last week and played two games with the Victorias of that city for the coveted Brewery trophy, which goes with the amateur championship of the province. The first game Monday night resulted in a win for the home team by 5-1. Speaking of the second game Tuesday night, the Albertan says:

The celebrated Brewery trophy is destined to remain another season with Calgary, unless a stronger team than Red Deer proved itself to be, comes along. The Victorias just pulled out a win last night at Victoria park in the last game with Red Deer, the score being 6-5. Upon the game depended the possession of the trophy, for the Victorias had waived whatever advantage had accrued to them from their win the first night, and staked all upon last night's game. For a while during the game it looked as if the historic silverware was about to take its departure from the precincts of the city that has sheltered it for so long, but the Victorias tied themselves together and won out. The game only lasted seven innings, darkness and an injury to pitcher Wagner of the Red Deer team ending the game.

WAGNER HIT 1000
The same man Wagner hit perfectly, getting three singles in three times up, and he pitched good ball after he got settled down. The first innings was his hardest, and he was as wild as a deer, making three wild pitches. It was in this inning the Victorias won, for five runs came in then. After that Wagner settled down and pitched real ball.

Seidenbecher decorated the slab for the Victorias, and his offering was puzzling to the Red Deer nine for about three innings. In the fourth and fifth they hammered five runs off him, and in the last couple of innings he steadied down and good holding helped him out.

ERRORS IN GAME
The game was not as fast as the first game, but there were interesting features. More errors crept into the play and the hitting was harder. The crowd present was so small they would have had little difficulty in escaping through a knot hole.

TWO PLAYERS WERE INJURED
Two Red Deer men were injured during the proceedings. Hewson, the chunky right fielder, collided with "Hal" Chase at first, and injured his leg so badly he was forced to retire. Then "Hank" Wagner, in the last innings, met with a mishap on the same sack.

SOME FIELDING STUNTS
The fielding of Mann, in left garden for the visitors, was a feature of the game. He pulled down two long flies, making the catches at difficult angles, too. Perrin, in right field for the Vics, picked a fly off his toes in the second.

RED DEER'S BAD START
Wagner was in hot water in the first. Stokes, the first man up, hit a grounder right at him, and he promptly muffed it. Hoar fouled out and Lepper got down on a fielder's choice, both men being safe. Frost & Wood No. 3 Binder

Has a Strong "Back Bone"

The Frost & Wood No. 3 Binder is built to stand more hard knocks than a binder is commonly supposed to encounter. Striking a bolder or bumping over rough ground does not affect this binder. That's because the binder's back bone consists of heavy pieces of steel firmly riveted together and because the platform is connected to the main power frame by a double steel brace. It's the Quality in material and workmanship that the makers put into the Frost & Wood No. 3 Binder that enables it to give three to five times as many years of service as ordinary binders.

We would like the privilege of showing you the construction of this binder. Then you can be your own judge as to its strength. We would also like to point out to you the Advantages of the Eccentric Sprocket Wheel, which is found on no other binder. This Eccentric Sprocket Wheel makes mowing, more compact, easier-to-shock handles and discharges them faster than ordinary binders. We also wish you to see the No. 3 Knott, which never hesitates an instant, no matter how hard and fast you ask it to work.

Drop in on us at your earliest convenience. We'll be pleased to see you any time. We believe we will make your visit interesting, too.

SIR WILFRID'S ADDRESS.

Those who heard Sir Wilfrid Laurier on Thursday afternoon and who heard Sir John A. Macdonald in 1891 were struck by the similarity of the addresses. In 1891 the Conservative leader was defending his policy of protection with all the energy and ability for which he was noted. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, as leader of the opposition at that time, said a protection tariff was a tariff for robbers, the people were being robbed, he promised if elected to reduce the public debt, to give the people free trade, to reform the Senate, said that railway subsidies were a fruitful source of jobbery, that he would give the people provincial rights, etc., etc.

He is satisfied now to defend himself against the attacks of his own followers. Almost his entire address was devoted to explaining why the policy of his administration was the best, and why the requests of the 8,000 farmers, through their representatives, could not be granted.

He was obliged to hear men like Mr. James Speakman, who had been life-long Liberals, tell him he had not reduced the tariff, that the people were taxed about $20 per head, a much heavier burden than under Conservative rule, and that while the duties per head of the population in 1895 was only $3.55, in 1900 under Liberal rule, it was $6.83 per head. His defence was that a revenue had to be raised to run the country. Free trade was not practicable at the present time. That to reduce the tariff, even a little, was a dangerous precedent which had to be considered very gingerly. In fact his speech was quite as much a protectionist speech as was Sir John A. Macdonald's twenty years ago.

The one great desideratum of the farming people of the West, and they amount to over 90 per cent of the people, is that the government reduce the tariff on agricultural implements. All parties are agreed on this one point, yet no promise was given, and the general impression left by the speech of Sir Wilfrid Laurier was that there would be no reduction to amount to anything for some time at least.

OUR RESPECTS TO THE DOCTOR.

Dr. Michael Clark, the member for Red Deer in the House of Commons, is to be congratulated on the success of the demonstration to Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues last week.

It was the doctor who insisted on Red Deer as the central place for the gathering in this riding for the purpose of having one splendid ovation to the Premier, and who insisted on time being given for a civic demonstration, when all classes, creeds and people could pay their respects to the leader of the government of Canada without fear or favor.

It was the doctor who put aside self interests in Olds for the general good. It was the doctor who was obliged to turn down Senator Peter Talbot and numerous lesser lights of the party that Red Deer might have her rights.

The doctor is getting to be rather a big man, and the smallest feature of his bigness is not that he is able to bury self interests in the general welfare of his party.

TARIFF IN THE WEST.

Toronto News.—The people of the West are not so keenly anxious for free trade, or even for reciprocity with the United States, as some newspaper reports of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's meetings would have us believe. From time to time that noted protectionist chieftain gets out his Cobden medal, and dances around the camp fire with other academic economists. The biggest pow-wow of all will be held when the premier reaches the tepee of Dr. Michael Clark at Red Deer.

Interested as the western farmer is in cheap agricultural implements, he is still more interested in facilities for getting his grain to market. He wants a railway to Hudson Bay, he desires a new or deeper Welland canal, he hopes to see the route tide water from Georgian Bay to the Upper Ottawa, that will cost from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000. He knows that these undertakings cannot be carried through without a full treasury. Therefore, he is not going to insist on doing away with the tariff just yet awhile.

By the time these transportation facilities are provided the West will have developed manufacturing industries of its own, and then the farmer will not care to destroy the populous industrial centres which furnish an immediate home market for much of his produce.

There are two other factors in the situation. The Western agriculturist is so prosperous that he does not feel the burden of the tariff very severely. Secondly, a preference in the British market for the produce of his farm would overcome such scruples against protection as he at present entertains. Lastly, the prairie farmer is such a patriot that he will not insist on crushing Eastern industries and depopulating the Eastern cities. It is clear from the tentative character of his utterances on fiscal questions that Sir Wilfrid Laurier recognizes these features of the situation.

Resolutions from U. F. A. Presented to Premier.

The Chilled Meat Question.

"Whereas it is of very great importance to the whole West that prompt government action be taken toward establishing a complete chilled meat system on a sound and permanent basis, with the interests of producers adequately protected.

"And whereas the live stock industry of Western Canada has been neglected and if the neglect is continued will soon result in impoverished farms, and the live stock industry of the country will make no headway until it is made worth the farmer's while to produce and furnish more and better stock.

"And whereas the farmers are on account of the unsatisfactory market going out of the meat producing business and will not again take it up until the market is placed upon a stable basis, and further, that under the present system of exporting there is always a danger of the markets of the world being closed to us, which would result in ruin to many.

"And whereas on account of the danger of encouraging monopolies the farmers of the west cannot be satisfied with anything short of a meat curing and chilling process inaugurated by the Dominion Government and operated in such a way that will guarantee to the producers the value of the animals they produce.

"Therefore, be it resolved that the Government be urgently requested to erect the necessary works and operate a modern and up-to-date method of exporting our meat animals.

"We suggest that a system owned and operated by the Government as a public utility, or a system of co-operation by the producers through one Government, in which the Government would supply the funds necessary to first install the system and provide for the gradual repayment of these funds and interest by a charge on the product passing through the system would, we believe, give the relief needed and make Western Canada one of the most prosperous meat producing countries in the world.

"Further, that we are absolutely opposed to any scheme of subsidizing any private concern which might be willing to embark in this business, as we believe this would only mean the perpetuation of a legalized monopoly and the practical annihilation of an export meat trade from the west."

Co-operative Legislation

"Whereas Bills were submitted to the Parliament of Canada, at the last session for the purpose of affording simple, cheap and effective facilities for the legal incorporation, regulation and control of Co-operative Societies.

"And whereas Legislation of the character mentioned being permissive only does not infringe the rights nor impair the legitimate interests, legal or moral, of any class of the community, nor does it restrain or obstruct the opportunities any section of the people enjoy in tendering to the public its services.

"And whereas it is essential that there should be one uniform law re-creative societies, in the development of what is known as the Co-operative Movement in Canada, and such legislation is for the general advantage of Canada.

"We therefore urge that the Government introduce at the next session of parliament legislation permitting the incorporation of co-operative societies."

"We wish to draw your attention to the great injustice done to the western farmers and their dissatisfaction on account of the rejection of the co-operative bills which were submitted to parliament during the last session and rejected in committee. The comparative condition of the western pioneer is much worse than was the condition of the pioneers of Eastern Canada in this respect."

"In the days of the early development of Ontario and Quebec not only were the farming and laboring classes subject to the disadvantages and limitations incidental to a new country, but the manufacturing and mercantile interests were also in a pioneer stage and had to make their growth with the country, and because of this they were not in a position to abuse their privilege in mandating a tribute from the producers and consumers of their wares. I the opening of this western country, the conditions are altogether different.

"Powerful corporations control every avenue of trade and commerce and by combining forces are able to take undue advantage of the helplessness of the farmer, who under present conditions is compelled to submit or give up in despair.

"As a means to offset this we ask that the Co-operative Bills be made law and thus allow those who wish to take advantage of the provisions contained in these bills to do so and in this way escape even in a partial measure from the tyranny of the trusts."

Terminal Elevators

"Whereas the lack of a terminal elevator at the Pacific Coast is the cause of great loss to Western Canada inasmuch as there is now no adequate means whereby grain can be transferred to ocean boats, and whereas the value of a western grain route is lost, as are also new markets for grain, particularly that of Mexico and in the Orient. Also serious loss is incurred to the producers by reason of the congestion of traffic on the lines going east during the shipping season.

"And whereas in the past the true value of their grain has been lost to the producers and the reputation of Canadian grain has suffered by reason of the manipulations of this grain going through the present terminal elevators.

"Therefore we ask that the Government at once take steps to build an elevator at the Pacific Coast and also that the Government take over and operate the present terminal elevators at Port William and Port Arthur, as asked for by the Grain Growers of Manitoba and Saskatchewan."

The Tariff

"Having suffered for many years under the bondage of a protective tariff which has been maintained by the Government and is but the levying of tribute upon the people, not for the legitimate expenses of the government but for a private and privileged class, and is a principle which should be condemned without qualification, and as in its practice operates the present Canadian tariff works unfairly in favor of the manufacturing industries and to the prejudice of the agricultural industries.

"We therefore ask as a general move toward freer trade that a general reduction of the tariff be made more particularly on woolen and cotton goods, also that the duty be immediately removed from all farm implements and tools. Further, that steps be taken to arrange with the United States Government for reciprocity in farm implements in accordance with the offer made by them.

Hudson's Bay Railway.

"That we endorse the resolutions of the Manitoba and Saskatchewan Grain Growers' Associations and request that the construction of the Hudson's Bay Railway be immediately proceeded with by the Government."

The Railway Question.

"Whereas the present Railway Act is working a grievous injustice to the stock raisers of the whole Dominion, and more particularly to those of Western Canada, where there are large areas of unenclosed lands, also government watering reserves, the value of which would be lost if cattle were prohibited from running at large on these lands.

"And whereas the kind of guards now in use are practically useless as a means of keeping stock off the railway lines, and the fences are often defective in their construction and state of repairs.

"And whereas the railway companies evade payment of losses for stock killed on their lines by taking advantage of the fact that the owners cannot always prove by what means their stock gained access to the railway lines.

"Therefore we ask that the Railway Act be so amended that where stock has been killed anywhere on the tracks, whether on crossing, such killing shall be in itself prima facie evidence that either the cattle guards or fences are defective, making the railway company responsible for such loss, and where disputes arise as to how the stock gains access to the lines the onus of proof be placed upon the railway company and also that the railway companies be held responsible for any other loss occasioned by and incidental to stock getting on to railway tracks, such as cattle driven and straying away or getting into crops."

Our congratulations: On Wednesday, the 10th, at the home of the bride's father, James Berna, and Miss Goldie Batorf were joined in the bands of Holy matrimony, Rev. Brown, of Red Deer, officiating.

Who Wants to be a Baldhead?

Thousands of men are daily growing bald and don't know it. These persistent germs of dandruff, often called the destructive agents of the devil, are in full possession of the future hair of thousands of Canadians. They have wonderful endurance, these game little demons, they never stop work, they dig and dig and dig and know and know and know night and day, day and night, with seemingly only one purpose in view, and that purpose to destroy the vitality of the hair and make us a race of baldheads.

What are you doing to protect yourself from the ravishing hordes of these almost unconquerable fiends? There is only one way, kill the dandruff germ, the quicker you start, the quicker you can win the battle. The only weapon you need is a bottle of Parian Sage, the only hair preparation that spells death to the dandruff germ.

Get a bottle to-day. Get it from Druggist & Book Co. sell it for 50 cents and guarantee it to cure dandruff in two weeks or money back. Direct charges, except for 10 cents, from Gironx Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER IN RED DEER.

Civic Reception and U. F. A. Addresses.

DRIVING FIRST SPIKE OF ALBERTA CENTRAL RAILWAY.

CIVIC RECEPTION

WEDNESDAY

The following address was read to Sir Wilfrid Laurier at the civic reception by citizens and the municipality Wednesday afternoon on the Town square.

Ex-Mayor H. E. Gaetz acted as chairman of the meeting and read the address to the Premier:

To the Right Honorable Sir Wilfrid Laurier, P.C., K.C.M.G. Sir:—

We tender you a most hearty welcome to the town and country of Red Deer. We greet you with pride as the Prime Minister of our beloved Dominion, as a leader whose broad statesmanship and compelling personality have been the greatest factors in establishing the Dominion of Canada in the enviable position which it today occupies, not only within the Empire but also among the nations of the world.

We greet you as a Canadian whose wide sympathies and devoted patriotism have been the greatest factors in the wide-spread Dominion with its diversified interests, races and creeds, into a united people working together in the common cause of national development.

We greet you at a man who exemplifies the highest ideals of Canadian citizenship, and who, through a long public career, has ever won the white flower of a blameless life, fortifying thereby humanity's hope in the ultimate triumph of Democracy.

We congratulate you on the great good health which has made possible to you the undertaking upon which you are now engaged. We are devotedly thankful for the providential escape of yourself and party from serious injury in the unfortunate accident to your train last week, and we trust you may complete your tour safely and return to your home in perfect health and vigor.

While deploring the fact that some parts of our Western Provinces through which you have passed have suffered seriously from drought during the present season, we are pleased to assure you that the Red Deer District is common with a large area of Central and Northern Alberta, has been blessed with an abundant rainfall and such other climatic conditions as have insured a bountiful crop.

The Town of Red Deer trust you will find a place of some interest to you. It is one of the towns which sprang into being upon the opening of the Calgary and Edmonton railway in 1889 and 1890, depending almost entirely upon the Agricultural development around us we have not a modern life, our streets are as reasonably good; we have a large extent of well kept walks; an excellent and abundant supply of water for domestic, fire and other purposes; a comprehensive and efficient sewer system. We have also a very satisfactory electric light, power and telephone services furnished by a local company.

Anticipating a rapid advance in the future we are acquiring adequate areas for public parks that the facilities of the future may be no less sufficient than those of the present.

The Government and administration of our Town are carried on by a council and the executive, the former possessing legislative, appropriative and directive powers, and the latter executive and administrative duties. This system we have found to be simple, and effective and economical. In a word, we have been concerned in laying broad, secure foundations in anticipation of that greater development which our favorable position renders inevitable.

In tendering you this address of welcome, Sir Wilfrid, we desire to include also your distinguished colleague, the Honorable George P. Graham, minister of Railways and Canals, as well as your associates, Messrs. Macdonald and Fardeau. We also cordially welcome our own particular representative in the Cabinet Hon. Frank Oliver, Minister of Interior, and your faithful friend, the Premier of Alberta, on this his first visit to our town in his new office, we also extend to you a warm welcome and trust we shall have his presence again on many future occasions.

Though we say utter a mere truism when we say that the political sympathies of our people are divided, yet the great majority of our citizens recognize that the men who serve the people in Government and Parliament are men of ability and patriotism and that many of them give public service at considerable self-sacrifice. We believe they will be better and better Canadians by reason of the efforts they have made to accompany you on this visit to our Great West.

We sincerely hope that your short stay in our midst may be enjoyable to you as it is certain to be to us, and that you may carry away with you many pleasant recollections of Red Deer, a community which is destined to be the metropolis of Central Alberta.

Sir Wilfrid, in replying, was most heartily received with a burst of applause. He referred to the party system which forms their method of government. He held the thorough belief that the motives of his political opponents were as pure as his own, and in the promotion of the welfare and happiness of this common country as were his own. He thanked them all for their welcome to the Dominion, and expressed his interest in the promotion of the welfare and happiness of this common country as were his own. He thanked them all for their welcome to the Dominion, and expressed his interest in the promotion of the welfare and happiness of this common country as were his own.

He hoped always to remain a son of the people. He was no longer an eastern man, he was a western man. Everyone was young here with hope and buoyancy and courage. Premier Sifton bore tribute to Sir Wilfrid's sympathy and work for the west.

CHILLED MEAT INDUSTRY.

The Provincial U.F.A. directors in a speech and resolution then presented their case for a chilled meat industry organized by the government on a co-operative basis, for a lower tariff, for government control, upon the use of elevators, for the Hudson Bay railway, James Bower, president of the Provincial organization, occupying the chair, and Messrs. Jas. Speakman, Warner, Freeman, and Tremblay, members of the executive, reading the resolutions.

Sir Wilfrid said he would reply to the resolutions and written speech the following day in his address.

FIRST SPIKE OF ALBERTA CENTRAL

Sir Wilfrid and party were then driven out to section 9 where the first spike of the Alberta Central was driven with all due honor. The Company had made great preparations for the occasion, a pavilion being constructed, benches for refreshments and seats for guests being provided, while motes were placed around the pavilion.

When the public had assembled Mr. J. H. Moore, President of the Alberta Central, opened the proceedings. He said that they were under an obligation they could not repay for the presence of the distinguished statesman who had been the instrument of bringing about the building of this railway; it was among the many benefits he had aided in giving the people of this Dominion, for which they had reason to be grateful. The people of the district had been long looking for the "gold dust" of a railway construction camp. At reasonable distances through their great country those who had reason to be grateful. and congratulated Mr. Moore on the happy occasion. He said:—

"It is part of our policy, which is part of the policy of the Dominion Government to assist all railways which will be useful to development of our common country and therefore, when application was made for the assistance from the Alberta Central Railway Company, and having looked into the matter very carefully, we came to the conclusion that this railway would be of great service to the people of this Dominion. Therefore, there was no hesitation on our part, and I am glad to see today that the Dominion Government will be called upon to spend a large sum of money on subsidies for the Alberta Central Railway."

"You have only to look at what took place today to see how the work of the Government is being done. I am glad to see the spike and my colleague has done the driving. So it is in Parliament. My ministers do all the driving while I reap the glory."

Graham said:—

"I trust you will not hold the idea that because we are presented with hammers that the Prime Minister and myself are knucklers. If we had been knucklers, there would have been action taken in the application of this railway for a subsidy. The subsidy originates in my department and has to run the gauntlet before it reaches the Premier. The Minister's private secretary before I can get in any further. We are in no sense knucklers in my idea. The Prime Minister has been all too good in saying that he just takes part in the operation of the driving. I cannot hardly agree with that. He is somewhat of a driver himself sometimes. We do not mind because we think we are having our own way, but you might think you are having your own way when you are not. You are having your wife's way. She makes up your mind and you have to follow her. What we have to do in all these things is to follow the Premier's example, and we do not go very far wrong. It is a great pleasure to be here today to take part in the opening up of a railway which we trust will be a great benefit to the territory through which it passes."

Refreshments were hurriedly served, after which a rush was made for the town by those present owing to the storm of wind and rain which hardly waited for the closing ceremony.

THURSDAY

Thursday morning was spent quietly by Sir Wilfrid, resting from his strenuous round of speeches and auto rides. One of the pleasant features being a visit to the little town of Ponoka, daughter of Clerk of the Court Simpson, who wanted to see Sir Wilfrid and started off on her own account, and spent some time chatting with him.

AFTERNOON

The big afternoon meeting was attended by about one thousand people, and there would have been more but for the gathering storm.

C. L. Durie, President of the Liberal Association, occupied the chair, and the distinguished speakers in a neat address, laying stress on the honor done Red Deer in having so many prominent statesmen in our town on one time.

PREMIER SIFTON

Premier Sifton opened the proceedings, declaring that the population and transportation of the western people will work out their own salvation.

HON. FRANK OLIVER'S ADDRESS.

Hon. Frank Oliver claimed credit for the government for a large share of the development of the west. These results were achieved with a magician's wand, but by bringing to bear high ambition, common sense and attention to details. He characterized the Premier as the great optimist of Canada.

DR. CLARK

Dr. Michael Clark, Red Deer's member, made a short, vigorous and excellent address. He was grateful to the Liberals of Disbrow, Olds, Bowden, Innisfail, and Ponoka, and that the Premier had shown a splendid example of self sacrifice in waiving their right to a visit from the Premier that this one great central demonstration might be successful.

He said the Canadian Pacific Railway company tried to kill the Premier politically, but he didn't know that they attacked him physically before, but physically he was really a tough nut to crack.

He spoke of and welcomed "the good boys of the press" and the visiting prominent politicians. He said Sir Wilfrid Laurier was not the exclusive possession of any party, and he heartily thanked the Conservatives of Red Deer for the splendid manner in which they had welcomed the Premier and his party. The Premier was deserving of the honor shown him, for not only was he a good man, a kind man, and a lover of his country, but he was a lover of humanity.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER

On rising to speak, Premier Laurier was greeted with applause.

A pretty incident marked the beginning, two smiling girls, Rosie Krause and Leola Smith, one a brunette and the other a blonde, presented him with bouquets of flowers.

Sir Wilfrid asked their names and kissed them.

Shortly after beginning his address it began to rain and the meeting was adjourned to the Lyric Theatre.

In coming west, hearing that there was a shortage of rain, he had ordered, through the weather bureau, a supply sent along. It had been with him wherever he had gone. Here it exceeded the demand, and he felt like countermanding the order. He again referred gratefully to the kindness of the Conservatives of Red Deer, and showed in the operation in the welcome and operation to him, and to his sympathy with democratic reforms.

The feature of the Premier's address, his reply to the delegation of the United Farmers of Alberta. Sir Wilfrid saw no cause, as suggested in the resolutions, that any distinction should exist between farmers and manufacturers. He denied that the tariff was made only for one class, declaring that the revenue from customs duty only would exist until Canada had more settled conditions, and explained the benefit of British preference was actually being felt in Canada. He promised that if it could not be that the question of terminal elevators could be settled in any other way, he would agree to government ownership, and suggested that in the meantime efficient legislation could be enacted against grain mixing.

Respecting the chilled meat question, he said that what would be done in Australia and New Zealand for the exportation of meat could be done in Canada.

"Last year a bill was passed in favor of the retail merchants, and I see no reason at all why it should not be done for any other class who want co-operation," was his reply to the resolution on co-operation.

QUESTION OF TARIFF

Speaking of the tariff, the Premier said that it is in the interest of the farmer and the manufacturer that they work for a common purpose.

"I don't admit clashing of interests. The tariff was made for all classes. I don't admit the reproach inferred in the petition in regard to Hon. Mr. Fielding's tariff of 1897. It is not invidious to anyone. I am a free trader; you want free trade immediately, but it cannot be done."

He pointed out that they could not have direct taxation upon income as in England, where there existed a leisured class, as in Canada there was no such class. He pointed out that they could not have direct taxation upon income as in England, where there existed a leisured class, as in Canada there was no such class.

The British preference, which was the government's foreign policy, would lead to Canada in that it ruled the prices of articles to consumers.

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP OF ELEVATORS

With respect to grain elevators he said he had under consideration the Minnesota state law, that he understood drove the operators of Duluth terminals to Port Arthur and Port William. What could be done at Duluth could be done at Canadian places.

Regarding the chilled meat question he declared that what had been done for the Ontario cheese trade in the way of transportation by sea and rail could be done for dead meat in the west, especially in view of the early construction of the Hudson Bay Railway.

RAILWAY QUESTION DEALT WITH

Hon. Geo. P. Graham took up the Railway act amendment question raised by the farmers, and declared that the amendments suggested were all in the present act, that the onus of proof for neglect was on the railway company where the cattle strayed on the tracks, and that the present cattle guard was the best that could be had, but the commission was willing to consider other patents; that pits were possible on account of the present heavy train; that the maker of fences being erected where railway construction is going on was on appeal now taken by the railways.

E. F. Pardo, M.P., said he discerned a feeling in the west that Canada was following in the footsteps of her southern neighbor and was permitting trusts to get the upper hand, and to refute this he explained Hon. Mackenzie King's combine act.

PRINTING OF BANKNOTES.

Uncle Sam's System is Complete as Map Can Make It.

The system of checks employed in the engraving division of the bureau of engraving at Washington to prevent irregularities is as complete as human ingenuity can devise. Each die, stamp and plate has a number in sequence stamped upon it, and by said number it is recorded. Each employee receiving a piece of steel to work on is charged with the same by its number and a description of the engraving to be made thereon and is not allowed to leave the building until the same has been returned and checked into the vaults. In the custodian's office complete records and the history of 35,000 dies, 10,000 stamps and 18,000 plates are on file. Once a year this office is audited and checked up by a committee appointed by the secretary of the treasury, each piece of engraved work being identified and compared with the records of the office. The system of checks and rules governing the custody of the work is so perfect that the history of the Bureau not a single plate has gone astray. After the plate is finally completed and approved a proof is taken and filed away, and if it should ever occur that a suspicious bill is presented a comparison with the recorded proof will readily show whether it is genuine or not and if counterfeit the difference between the genuine and spurious.

The busiest room in the bureau is that devoted to plate printing. The operation looks like a great degree of skill is required to produce perfect work, and plate printing is a trade in itself. The man who gives the receipt for the plate form, he receives a green sheet of paper he receives, the press registers every impression made, and the man who will return the plate and accounts for every sheet of paper.

With every order to print 1,000 sheets of paper, there is a liability of spoiling sheets in the wetting, printing or numbering. After the plate is printed, the sheets are being carefully examined by trained experts, who separate all imperfect sheets, and the accuracy and speed with which they detect imperfections are not the least interesting part of "money making." A spot, a stain, a light or uneven impression that would show on a bank note, and the sheets are sent to the destruction committee, where it is destroyed with the same safeguards that are used in the destruction of old, torn or mutilated currency.

The notes of all national banks are alike as to the outline of the face, but the design and character of each bank are of course different, while the back of all national bank notes in any one state is alike, yet there is a distinctive design on each side of the 1882 series of notes. The more recent designs issued by the bureau, known as the 1902 series, have a comparative direct space on each side of the face, such disposition being necessary in order to show clearly the silk fiber imbedded in the distinctive paper.

You want free trade immediately, but it cannot be done."

Hooking the "Crook."

A new kind of self defense is quite common in France and Italy. It is simply the practiced use of crook hand umbrella or walking stick. A young lady who was an adept arrested a pickpocket who had seized her bag purse and sent him sprawling at full length on his face on the road, having neatly tripped him up by crooking the right angle of the human "crook" with her umbrella. Again, when he rose to his feet and sprang at the lady she encircled his neck by the crook of the umbrella and laid him on his face again. Again she swung him by gripping his left ankle and picked up the stolen bag with her umbrella.

A Dean's Views on Prohibition

To the Editor of The News.

Dear Sir,—In your issue of the 27th ult. appeared a letter under the above heading from one signing himself "A Reader," upon which, as a member of the Church of England, I shall be pleased if allowed to make some comment. Forging, if same passed unnoticed, or impression may be left in the minds of some that the church was indifferent, or even favored the liquor traffic.

At the Synod meeting referred to, the report of the moral reform committee was under discussion. That document recommended the Synod to place itself on record as opposed to the granting of liquor licenses to clubs. It is already on record as being opposed to the bar, and recommends that "until such a time as the bar is abolished, full advantage be taken, when practicable, of the adoption and putting into force of local option under the present license law."

Whatever opinion Rural Dean Cayley may have regarding the bar, he seems to have been opposed to having the Synod go on record, believing that our religion is not one of words but of good common sense.

If the liquor traffic is wrong the Almighty is opposed to it, though he may not have singled it out from other wrongs, and what he would do we can fearlessly follow. As it is, the result following the drinking of liquor is the same whether in the club or saloon, and as that result is bad, we safely say the traffic is a true bringer of evil, and as such must be cut down and cast into the fire. These are the Master's words, and they sound to me much as if we had some distance yet to go before reaching the standard of prohibition He has set. I am even convinced in the fact that we are so slow in getting the work done. If a sparrow does not fall to the earth without our Father's knowledge, and the hairs of our head are numbered, what would His attitude be to a traffic that is estimated to have placed in Canada alone 4,000 of His children in drunkard's graves during the past year? Are we not ashamed to call him Father, then license such a wrong? Under the power of such a thought we are sure, though we offend some of the "splendid men" referred to, always hoping they will see the right, then help us.

Thanking you for space, I remain, yours sincerely,

ANGLICAN.

Many dope fiends contracted the drug habit in the cradle

Certain dangerous drugs were given to them in their baby days in the form of "Soothing Syrups," "colic cures" and "infants' friends." The harmful effect of "soothers" containing opium, morphine, chloroform, chloral, etc., cannot be too strongly stated. Do not give baby a "soother" unless you positively must. Then give it

CHAPTER XXIV.

KIRKWOOD hesitated. It was not feeling to tell her why, yet it was essential that she know, however painful the knowledge might prove to be.

And she was impatient. He might not dodge the issue. "Why?" she repeated as he paused.

"I wish you wouldn't press me for an answer just now, Miss Calender."

"Don't you think I'd better know?"

Instinctively he inclined his head in assent.

"Then why?"

Kirkwood bent forward and pulled the flask of the satchel that held the gladiolus bag.

"What does that mean, Mr. Kirkwood?"

"That I have the jewels," he told her tersely, looking straight ahead.

At his shoulder he heard a low gasp of amazement and incredulity mingled.

"But—how did you get them? My father deposited them in bank this morning?"

"He must have taken them out again, I got them on board the Albatross, where your father was conferring with Mulready and Captain Stryker."

"The Albatross?"

"Yes."

"You took them from those men—yes? But didn't my father—"

"I had to persuade him," said Kirkwood simply.

"But there were three of them against you?"

"Mulready wasn't ab-freeling very well, and Stryker's a coward. They gave me no trouble. I looked them in Stryker's room, lifted the bag of jewels and came away. I ought to tell you that they were discussing the advisability of sailing away without you, leaving you free, friendless and without means. That's why I considered it my duty to take a hand. I don't like to tell you so brutally, but you ought to know."

"I understand."

But for some moments she did not speak. He avoided looking at her.

The face, rolling at top speed, but smoothly, on the broadest of tracks, endeared the ancient city, turned into the Avenue de Keyser, bringing into sight the Gare Centrale.

"You don't—how—began the girl without warning, in a voice soft with sobs.

"Steady on!" said Kirkwood gently. "I do know, but don't let's talk about it now. We'll be at the station in a minute, and I'll get out and see what's to be done about a train if neither Mulready nor Stryker is about."

"Please!" she agreed brokenly.

The face above us and stopped.

"Are you all right, Miss Calender?" Kirkwood asked.

The girl sat up, lifting her head proudly. "I am quite ready," she said, steepling her fingers.

Kirkwood remembered through the window while the driver was descending.

"Gore Centrale, m'sieu!" he said, opening the door.

"No one in sight," Kirkwood told the girl. "Come, please."

He got out and gave her his hand, then paid the driver, picked up his two bags and hurried with Dorothy into the station to find in waiting a string of cars into which people were moving at leisurely rates. His inquiries at the ticket window developed the fact that it was the 22-26 for Brussels, the last train leaving the Gare Centrale that night and due to start in ten minutes.

The information settled their plans for once and all. Kirkwood promptly secured through tickets, also purchasing "reserve" supplementary tickets which entitled them to the use of those modern corridor coaches which take the place of first class compartments on the Belgian state railways.

"It's a pleasure," said Kirkwood lightly as he followed the girl into one of these, "to find oneself in a common sense sort of train again. Feels like home." He put his luggage in one of the racks and sat down beside her.

The girl smiled bravely. "And after Brussels?" she inquired.

"First train for the coast," he said promptly—"Dover, Ostend, Boulogne, whichever proves handiest, no matter which, so long as it gets us on English soil without undue delay."

She said "Yes" abstractedly, resting her elbow on the window sill and her chin on her palm, to stare with serious, sad brown eyes out into the are shining light that hung beneath the ebbing roof.

Kirkwood gazed at her in spite of the constraint he placed himself under to be still and not disturb her needlessly. Impatience and apprehension of misfortune obsessed his mental processes in equal degree. The ten minutes seemed interminable that elapsed ere the grinding couplings advertised the imminence of their start.

met the look with one that was like a kick, and the fellow passed with some haste into the car behind.

"Who was that?" demanded the girl without moving her head.

"How did you know?" he asked, astonished. "You didn't look?"

"I saw your knuckles whiten beneath the skin. Who was it?"

"Hobbs," he acknowledged bitterly, "the mate of the Albatross."

"I know. And you think—"

"Yes. He must have been ashore from the Albatross on board the train. He certainly wasn't in the cab."

He certainly wasn't in the cab, or ran across him and pressed him into service. You saw they're watching every outlet. But we'll win through, never fear!"

The train, escaping the outskirts of the city, remarked the event with an exultant air, then settled down, drinking steadily, to night devouring flight. In the corridor car the few passengers disposed themselves to droze away the coming hour—the short hour's ride, in these piping days of frantic traveling, separates Antwerp from the capital of Belgium.

A guard, glancing quickly in through the front door, reeled unsteadily down the aisle. Kirkwood, rising from his seat, met the look with one that was like a kick, and the fellow passed with some haste into the car behind.

STOP POISONING YOURSELF

Headaches and Neuralgic Pains Promptly Cured by "Fruit-a-Lives."

Where there are frequent attacks of Neuralgia and Headaches, there is always Constipation, Weakness of the Kidneys and Blood Poisoning.

Non-action of the bowels compels the blood to absorb foul matter which should have passed from the body.

Weak Kidneys fail to filter from the blood the necessary amount of waste.

The blood thus becomes poisoned and it is this poisoned blood which causes Neuralgia and Headaches.

"Fruit-a-Lives" made from fruit juices cleanses the bowels and kidneys and is the greatest blood purifying medicine in the world.

"Fruit-a-Lives" is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 5 for $2.50, or trial size, 10c a box, 10 for $1.00.

WHEN JENNY LIND SANG.

A Nightingale That Charmed Hearts as Well as Birds.

Nothing in Richard Hoffman's musical recollections is more charming than his description of Jenny Lind.

"She would trip on and off," he says, "as in an ecstasy of delight at the opportunity of singing, bowing and smiling to her audience and giving every one present a flattering sense of contributing in a measure toward the success of the evening. She had three or four songs which showed the wonderful compass and power of her voice, and one or more of these were called for at every concert—a Swedish echo song in which she would echo her own voice by a sort of ventriloquism that was quite marvelous and another in which she made a remarkable diminuendo, reaching a pianissimo as faint as a sigh, but with a carrying power that made it distinctly audible at the most extreme limits of Castle Garden or Tripler Hall, where the later concerts were given."

Calcutta's Population

The Statesman, in estimating the coming census, shows that Calcutta is very much like London in that it possesses an enormously larger population by day than by night. Like London, too, this day population has increased rapidly since the middle of the century. In 1801 it numbered 170,133; in 1891 it was over 300,000; and today it is probably, says the Statesman, 400,000 more. To correct possible statistical misrepresentation the corporation are proposing to hold a "day census" shortly after the taking of the general one.—Westminster Gazette.

A Sheffield tinner who had been invited to dinner was asked to sing and although he had no music with him and was nearly as hoarse as a frog, the result of a bad cold, he consented to try, but broke down.

"Never mind, lad," said an elderly guest, trying to cheer him up, "never mind the breakdown, for this doesn't hurt, but if it's taken out of you, sing out!" he was taken out and shot.

In the sixteenth century clothes were sent from all parts of France to be washed in Holland, where the Statesman says that the water was supplied with special cleansing properties. To a boat of transport was about ten times greater in those days than it is now.

A British expedition in the Congo Free State received much more aid in those days than it does now, by hiring a toy elephant in which each man moved its legs and trunk.

Son—"Papa, what does writer's cramp mean?"

It means cramped for money. Most writers suffer from it.

It goes without saying that two women never do.

What makes a mother sure of her boy's intellect is to have somebody tell her he looks like his maternal grandfather.

The Frenchman's rare talent in matters of this sort is shown in that sweet little story of a man who had a very good friend, a white haired old lady upon her

Russia Is Facing A Serious Cholera Epidemic

Conditions in St. Petersburg Approach Those of the Great 1898 Scurge.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 9.—Russia's scourge, the cholera, continues to spread with alarming rapidity, particularly in the southern mining districts, and in St. Petersburg, where the conditions are fast approaching the proportions of the great epidemic of 1898. Figures furnished to-day by the Central Sanitary Bureau show that during the week from July 24th to July 31st, there were 15,244 cases of cholera, and 6,944 deaths. Of these, 4,870 cases, and 333 deaths were reported from the provinces of Pskov, Novgorod, and the territory of the Don Cossacks, in South Russia. A report from the United Mine Owners' association covering 48 mines and 4 foundries, gives 2,970 cases and 1,250 deaths. The extent of the plague among the miners is shown by figures furnished from 18 mines, where about 8,000 of the 46,000 employees have died.

TAKE PREVENTATIVE MEASURES.
In answer to the appeal of the association for special measures to check the epidemic and stem the panic which threatens to stop the production of coal and iron in South Russia the government to-day decided to send to the mining regions a special commission to study the situation and empowered to organize sanitary preventive work. The assembly of Hokeratinskoy to-day assigned $200,000 for the cause.

The desertion of work by the laborers extends also to the railroad employees, and the workmen in the ports in South Russia, threatening to cripple the export movement of grain. Advice from Hokeratinskoy report that the transportation of crops is at a standstill.

The epidemic continues to make enormous progress in the capital, where the daily average of cases jumped last week to 30. Yesterday 123 cases of suspected cholera were taken to the hospitals, and there were 30 deaths. The hospitals now contain 962 cases. The high record reached in 1898 was 142 cases per day.

ODessa OUTBREAK UNDER CONTROL

The outbreak of the bubonic plague at Odessa against which Austria, Roumania, Bulgaria and Turkey have instituted strict quarantines, is not spreading. It is a noteworthy fact that the cases of plague were first reported from a district in the south, in which the epidemic of bubonic plague started in 1902. Odessa has been afflicted with a scourge of rats since May, and lack of effective measures taken to kill off the rats by the authorities are blamed for the outbreak.

Our Militia of Little Value.

Ottawa, Aug. 11.—It is stated by those who should be in a position to know that the report of General Sir John French on the conditions obtaining in the Canadian militia contains three cardinal features:

- (1) That the peace organization and the composition of the militia should be such that, in the event of war breaking out, the forces would be ready to take the field forthwith. The general finds that this is not the state of affairs at present.
- (2) That better qualified and more effective staffs than at present should be in command of brigade divisions.
- (3) That the period of annual training is wholly inadequate to produce satisfactory results.

"Teddy" For Governor.

New York Politicians See Way Out of Difficulty in Election of Ex-President

New York, August 9.—Nominating Theodore Roosevelt for Governor of New York and trust to look, is the plan prepared to-day by some of the leaders of the republican organization in New York as a way out of the political dilemma they are facing in this fall's campaign. Mr. Roosevelt does not want the nomination and the plan entails the adjournment of the convention until he can decline.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH
PERT PARAGRAPHS.

THE very minute we have a case we see that it is different from all others and that no rules apply.

Seriously the consolation a man has for having reached the condition of indifference.

But, then, a perfectly wise man wouldn't sit conditions, and he would have a most wonderful time of it.

There are abundant reasons why all of us should do as we ought, but some of us aren't on speaking terms with them.

It is hard to convince a man that he is right when a bigger man is sitting on him.

Maybe we can't discover the north pole because some Norwegian of long ago found it and used it for fuel.

There are people who are nothing if not spectacular, and rarely that.

The canning season being at hand, general discussions should walk circumspectly.

Why it should be necessary to be uncomfortable in order to be comfortable is one of the inexplicable things.

People usually like to be on the ground when a special form of amusement is going on, but dynamite is the exception.

No Bond of Sympathy.
An earthquake I have never met.
While strolling down the pike,
Nor am I curious to see
To know what they are like.
I wouldn't care to call one down
Or try its wrath to stem.
They will just let me alone
If I do as much for them.

Some foolish people might desire
An earthquake for a pet.
But that would not appear to me
To be the best bet.
I'd rather have a poodle dog
That follows me around
Than have the very finest quake
That ever shook the ground.

An earthquake is so very rare;
It happened in no name.
But in the papers that it cuts
In working out its game.
When it has in a reckless mood
Roused up some special spot
The owner of the place observes
His house won't fit his lot.

Experience is very fine—
It helps a man along—
But I will pass the earthquake up
And take some not so strong.
If in advance I can but know
Where it will run amuck
I'll take my family and my grip
And make a graceful duck.

No Visible Supply.
"Do you question my sanity?"
"Well, I might under some circumstances."

"What circumstances?"
"I was once to see enough of it to point a question at."

Caustic.
"They say she married a poor man."
"I can well understand that."

"Why?"
"Anybody would feel like exclaiming 'Poor man!' when speaking of the man she married."

Answered.
What statesman large would trudge
Or list to a suggestion
From common people coming?
That low, suggestive coming?
Is answer to the question.
The situation summing.

Had it in For Him.
"Why don't you write a novel?"
"A novel?"
"Sure?"
"What for?"
"The critics."

Sure Remedy.
"They call her very beautiful."
"She must have taken treatment."

"No; her father struck off."

Taking Chances.
"Don't point that gun at me."
"Don't be frightened. My finger wasn't near the trigger."
"That's all right. It might spring a leak."

Too Late.
Some fellows are so careful slow
They miss a lot of fun
By never picking winners
Until the race is run.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER

The Premier of Canada

By sheer force of ability and the compelling power of character, Sir Wilfrid Laurier has reached the highest position in the annals of the British Empire. He has overcome obstacles that would have daunted a man of less virile genius and patriotism. Though French was his ancestry and language, and Catholicism his religion, he has become the leader of the destinies of a great English-speaking nation, the larger part of whose people are Protestants.

He was born in St. Louis, Quebec, in 1841, of a family of rebels who fought bravely under Papineau in the revolt of 1837. From the little country school where his teacher, a Scotchman, spurred his ambition and powerfully influenced his life, he passed to L'Assomption college, and in 1864, after completing his course in law, entered the Bar. When he made his debut in politics in 1871 as a member of the Quebec assembly, his magic eloquence, the fearlessness, strength and calmness of his words, and the mastery by which he brought order out of chaos, light out of darkness, thrilled his audience.

Three years later he resigned from the Legislature and was returned to the House of Commons on the overthrow of the Macdonald government. In 1878 he became minister of inland revenue, and two years later changes in politics deprived him of this position. He was the acknowledged leader of the Liberals who were the Opposition party until 1896, when after eighteen years of waiting, the reins of government again came into their hands and in the first flush of triumph they made him Premier.

His statesmanship has been broad, liberal, far-sighted; his patriotism and his love of liberty are manifest in every act and word. He loves and cherishes the British Empire, and glories in the part that Canada takes in it; but as a Power of great possibility, sharing with the United States the golden future of the American continent, he demands of England and the world the recognition of Canada, not as a babe in the swaddling clothes of a colony, but as a full grown nation of victory and assured triumph.

Tall, erect, with a handsome presence, clean-shaven face, clear, penetrating blue eyes, a firm mouth, broad shoulders, a brow masterful and dignified, a voice soft, sonorous and ever with the suggestion of unexhausted reserve, a smile gentle and soothing as a benediction, with a courtesy and kindness that surround him as an aura—this is Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Canada's greatest orator and statesman.

Reproduced according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by W. G. Black, at the Department of Agriculture.

The Family Purse

If it were always full enough to need no consideration, how much easier it would be for us all.

But, unfortunately, we must regulate our desires to suit the size of the family purse.

It's all right to be economical, but in buying Furniture there's a point where cheapness ceases to be economy. Goods below this point are dear, no matter how little they cost.

This class of goods WE do not handle at all.

We always consider the welfare of the family purse. We make its burdens lighter by knowing what to buy and where. By taking advantage of all price concessions. By sticking close to the better class of goods.

Give us a chance to prove our claims to you.
